

Diversity

AT WORK

LANGUAGE SOLUTIONS

WHAT WOULD YOU SAY?

[WWW.NORQUEST.CA/
INTERCULTURALSIMULATIONS](http://WWW.NORQUEST.CA/INTERCULTURALSIMULATIONS)

Diversity

AT WORK

LANGUAGE SOLUTIONS

WHAT WOULD YOU SAY?

[WWW.NORQUEST.CA/
INTERCULTURALSIMULATIONS](http://WWW.NORQUEST.CA/INTERCULTURALSIMULATIONS)

Diversity

AT WORK

LANGUAGE SOLUTIONS

WHAT WOULD YOU SAY?

[WWW.NORQUEST.CA/
INTERCULTURALSIMULATIONS](http://WWW.NORQUEST.CA/INTERCULTURALSIMULATIONS)

SITUATIONS

RESPONDING TO LEADERSHIP FEEDBACK

You have worked in a company for 6 months. Your boss invites you to a feedback session. He welcomes you into the room and says that overall you are doing a good job. Then he says, "You've obviously noticed that team members are expected to speak up here".

You are uncertain why he said this to you.

RESPONDING TO A LEADERSHIP REQUEST

You have worked in a company for a short time. You have written an email to a client and copied it to your boss before sending it. Your boss asks you to look over his edits before sending it because he wants it to be spotless.

You are unsure of your boss's expectations.

RESPONDING TO ONBOARDING

You have recently been hired onto a team. You think the work assigned to you is not appropriate for your high level of technical skill and experience. In a meeting with your manager you learn that he wants the administrative assistant to "show you the ropes". He says he want you to work on introductory tasks and meet again in a month.

You are dissatisfied with his request.

SITUATIONS

RESPONDING TO LEADERSHIP FEEDBACK

You have worked in a company for 6 months. Your boss invites you to a feedback session. He welcomes you into the room and says that overall you are doing a good job. Then he says, "You've obviously noticed that team members are expected to speak up here".

You are uncertain why he said this to you.

RESPONDING TO A LEADERSHIP REQUEST

You have worked in a company for a short time. You have written an email to a client and copied it to your boss before sending it. Your boss asks you to look over his edits before sending it because he wants it to be spotless.

You are unsure of your boss's expectations.

RESPONDING TO ONBOARDING

You have recently been hired onto a team. You think the work assigned to you is not appropriate for your high level of technical skill and experience. In a meeting with your manager you learn that he wants the administrative assistant to "show you the ropes". He says he want you to work on introductory tasks and meet again in a month.

You are dissatisfied with his request.

SITUATIONS

RESPONDING TO LEADERSHIP FEEDBACK

You have worked in a company for 6 months. Your boss invites you to a feedback session. He welcomes you into the room and says that overall you are doing a good job. Then he says, "You've obviously noticed that team members are expected to speak up here".

You are uncertain why he said this to you.

RESPONDING TO A LEADERSHIP REQUEST

You have worked in a company for a short time. You have written an email to a client and copied it to your boss before sending it. Your boss asks you to look over his edits before sending it because he wants it to be spotless.

You are unsure of your boss's expectations.

RESPONDING TO ONBOARDING

You have recently been hired onto a team. You think the work assigned to you is not appropriate for your high level of technical skill and experience. In a meeting with your manager you learn that he wants the administrative assistant to "show you the ropes". He says he want you to work on introductory tasks and meet again in a month.

You are dissatisfied with his request.